

We give an introduction into mathematical treatment of pure point diffraction. A natural framework is provided by stochastic processes. We review results on the direct problem and we discuss recent joint work with Robert V. Moody on the inverse problem. In this joint work we show how processes with pure point diffraction can be classified via a certain group.