Maximal tori determining algebraic groups

Shripad Garge

We look at the question of determining a reductive algebraic group by the set of isomorphism classes of its maximal tori. If k denotes a field that admits cyclic extensions of any given degree (examples of such fields include finite fields, number fields and local fields), then we give a positive answer to the above question for split groups.